

THE LONG-FORM AUDITORS' REPORT – what does it mean for this year's audit?

With effect from 15 December this year, auditor's reports on listed company's financial statements will be dramatically different from the existing 'boilerplate' auditor's reports that auditors have been issuing for many years. In particular, auditors are required to highlight, in a new and separate section in the so-called "long-form auditor's reports", Key Audit Matters (KAM) that, in the auditor's professional judgment, were of most significance in the audit. The identification and disclosures of KAM are not expected to be "boilerplate" (or standardized); each listed company has its own facts and circumstances and accordingly the reporting of KAMs will be different from one company to another company.

With the year end approaching, this seminar aims to share with you the above matters:

- What are KAMs? How do auditors identify KAMs?
- How do auditors address KAMs? How do auditors reflect KAMs in the long-form auditor's report?
- How should reporting in the financial statements and elsewhere in the annual report match with KAMs?
- What are the implications of KAMs on responsibilities of management and Audit Committees?
