The mentoring relationship is a partnership. Participation of both parties is voluntary, and thus the success of the program is dependent on the commitment of both the mentee and the mentor. Meetings between mentor and mentee are as flexible as the participants desire them to be: they can occur as often as it is convenient and range from casual exchanges to formal meetings. The Mentor Program is not intended as a job placement service, but is offered as a tool for students and recent alumni seeking career path advice from successful and experienced Rutgers-Camden alumni.
